INDYGO

The sublime beauty of organic, mystical or romantic nature has inspired Indygo to showcase unusual stones rarely used in jewelry. Peru, Amazonia, Siberia, Arizona... these gems are associated with 18kt pink gold, diamonds and sapphires, in a resolutely colorful and precious collection.

Color Jewelry

AZURITE MALACHITE

Two stones intermingle : sky blue Azurite and Malachite ribbons in variations of pale green all the way to dark green. Discovered in Ural, Russian craftsmen used it to sculpt snuff boxes or saber handles for their Tsars.

M

MAMMOTH BONE

From mammoth skeletons found in Siberia and magnificently preserved by frost under the tundra. A white veined organic material of the highest purity, worn as a lucky charm by Inuit hunters in Alaska.

J

BLACK JADE

The Jade name dates back to the Conquistadors. It is found in sculptures and figurines from the Incas, and in China. Jade soothes kidney problems, and exists in various colors, green, white, black. The latter is veined with copper, giving it a mysterious aura.

G

GREEN TURQUOISE

A rare gem found in India, Egypt, Nevada.
A luminous and intense green,
with golden pyrite veins.
A gem rarely used in jewelry.

R

RAINBOW ANTIQUE

An incredible color patchwork reminiscent of the Impressionists. The full rainbow is represented.
Each stone is unique in its color variations.

BLUETURQUOISE

Turquoise means gem from Turkey, discovered in ancient Persia. Its celestial intense blue is conducive to meditation and contemplation. It is now found in Arizona and Afghanistan ; mixed with oil, it becomes a clear paint as blue as the ocean's deepest waters.

PHOSPHOSIDERITE

A pale purple stone, with the softness of lavender or orchids. It contains phosphorus and siderite, « sideros » in Greek meaning pink gem.

Discovered in Chile and in Argentina, it is purported to develop concentration in meditation, to calm and pave the way to spirituality.

I

INDYGO

It all began in the Cashmir mountains,
as mysterious blue gems were traded for salt.

The legend of sapphires was born.

The raw gem was blue, pink, pale green, purple or orange-yellow. All these hues inspired the PLANET and BAMBOO collections,
where sapphires are paired with gems of unexpected colors :
Apatite's ocean blue, Amazonites turquoise blue,
Malachites organic green, Charoites soft purple,
as well as Chrysoprases startling green.
